The video was very well done! There are few key areas that I believe we need to truncate/edit from the video, as explained below. Of course, I am available to provide greater detail why I am making these recommendations.

Please consider your environmental responsibility before printing this e-mail message. If taken literally, while I understand the honest intentions of those who really need a hard copy, these statements could be used in litigation to support a claim of illegal business tactics/fraud.

- Statements concerning creating a "multi-million-dollar company" by "investing." Recommend truncation of the audio at 0:39-0:41.
- Statement concerning providing "100% profit." Recommend truncation of video at 10:51-10:54 (right after "we reverse that" until right before "this is how much you are going to get").
- Statement concerning an investor receiving a "million-dollar" company by investing. Recommend truncation of the video at 59:33-1:00:00 (Sanjay's statement right before he says "it's a lot of hard work building these companies").

2. Todd innocently makes statements that could be construed as purposeful reckless hiring of unqualified drivers. While it is a good feel-good statement supporting our efforts to bring in fresh drivers, the statement that we are "taking a gamble" on them might be used (in conjunction with the earlier statement about how there is a driver shortage) to suggest that we are knowingly hiring unqualified drivers despite the risk that they pose to the public. Such a statement would be used in litigation to support claims of punitive damages against RBL. Recommend truncation of 32:11-32:53.

3. BK describes how he created a company because creditors were avoiding lending to RBL because it was growing too fast. While I believe that this is probably completely legitimate, the statement could be used by a lender in a dispute to support a bank fraud or "loan stacking" claim. A lender could argue that the businesses created are not real companies but are instead "synthetic" businesses designed to trick a financial institution into lending money to RBL when it would not otherwise do so. Furthermore, the statement might appear fraudulent to a sophisticated large lender and dissuade them from doing business with us. Recommend truncating 4:44-5:01 (cutting from "and when we tried to get a third truck" until right before "it took me a long time to get approved for a loan").

4. Load management makes statements which represent illegal discrimination. Recommend truncation of 38:31 – 39:02 (Right after “predominately men” until right before Sanjay says “good morning”). While the statements are only one part of the section, there are several “sex” based comments which don’t add a whole lot and have ambiguous propriety. We should consider removing the greater section of 37:36 - 39:02.

5. We need a disclaimer statement displayed. The more prominently placed, the better; however I recognize that placing this too prominently might take away from the audio-visual impact of the video. As a middle ground between business/legal interests, I suggest the following be put in the video comment and shown in the video at the end:

Royal Bengal Logistics, Inc investor programs provide opportunities for investors to earn a fixed return during the term of their loan. Program participants issue loans to the company and do not receive any ownership interest because of their participation. Program participants receive the same return on their investment regardless as to how well or how poorly the company performs. The information contained within this video are for informational purposes only, and the particular terms of the investor program are contained solely within the written contract between program participants and Royal Bengal Logistics, Inc. Royal Bengal Logistics, Inc does not provide legal or financial advice, and all potential investor program participants should acquire their own legal and financial advice prior to participating in any investor program.

If you are in agreement with these changes, I can coordinate directly with the production company.

I reviewed the video and am preparing particular recommendations. In the meantime, could you advise if we have releases signed by everyone who speaks in the video? Is there a sample of these releases that I could take a look at?

Thank you!

Good morning Sheetal,

I hope you have been enjoying your holidays! Thank you so much for your patience. I was trying to get you the preview before Thanksgiving, but due to the size of the file, it took twice as long as anticipated to render, export and upload a copy to YouTube.

I have provided the link below, which is unlisted and can only be accessed using the link. Be sure to watch it at the highest YouTube video setting (2160p). More music and credits still need to be added.

I have also attached the final invoice for payment.

Should you have any questions, please let me know.

Looking forward to hearing from you!

Respectfully,
